

1:45 – Andrew Selseth

I began running in 2011 as a way to meet more people after graduating college and to aim at a new goals. I ended up hitting the jackpot as racing marathons is not only responsible for my fiancé and I meeting but has introduced me into one of the most amazing and inspiring communities which has lead me to pacing! Pacing races has become one of my favorite ways to expand my running network and engage in multiple communities. I have yet to come across many other activities than I enjoy more than helping others achieve a personal best. Come run with me and we'll crush it together! See you on the start line everyone! Cheers!
