I started my running journey at Twin Cities 5K in October 2010. I finished the Twin Cities Marathon 2011 as my first marathon. Since then, running became part of my lifestyle. I co-founded a running club at my workplace and watched it grow internationally. I finished the Boston Marathon in 2013 and witnessed the tragedy. That horrible experience made me more committed to running and the runners' community. After finishing so many half marathons and marathons, I wanted to find a way to give back to the community. In 2015, I started pacing at races in the Twin Cities area. I have found great joy and satisfaction in pacing and taking runners from start to finish.
